J. HORACE HARDING.

After Several Interviews

With an uncommunicative but level-headed gentleman, who proposes to safeguard his estate for his heirs, he decides on a very wise course in reference to the settlement of his estate and its management after

When his mind was made up, we asked him this question-"What reason impelled you to come down and talk with us?" '

His answer was to the point. Said he: "Plain common sense tells me that an institution like the VIR-GINIA TRUST COMPANY is better qualified to act as Executor and Trustee than an individual. Every argument is in its favor, and I believe I could convince a majority of prudent men that it is true. If desired you can base an advertisement on this state-
